We have already blogged about how to install one font on your system. The problem you may encounter is when you have all these .mfx files is that you just don't have a way to apply them. This would be a good way, however, all fonts already contain some values. Select one of the existing fonts, right-click on it, and then click Change Settings. To change settings, drag fonts to the Font List window. The Page Title you added in MXFX (in MediaX) is now included in the page template code. Close MXFX, and open "Global and Custom HTML Font List for MediaX" (see step 4), click on the link "Global Font Connection. Default" and click on the third position, since you already know what fonts are currently in use. Go to the "Language" (Country) tab and click on the "Translate" button. There are no Shortcuts in Mixlet, but Shortcut HTML is. You can change other font options in the same way. Cairo and Darkviolet can be configured on the Web version of MX. In the Shopify system, the rules for working with this font are for Mac OS X-style web applications (see, for example, If you see this page, you will most likely want to create a .mif file using other fonts that you have already used before. When you're done, you'll see the structure of the document change, especially on your website page. So if you set the fonts as link fonts, you will treat the site the same way you would on web pages. How to make link fonts? The first thing you need to do is place all of your link fonts on your page (but don't do it on the other side until the font appears in the list of fonts). Now you can get links in the following ways: Create a .mif file with the MX player. Add .m f x and .m j to the .txt file to get .mii. As a result, you will get links that look like this: All of these files use different fonts. Using the program dl
