Heck, he wrote the book on them. So it's no surprise that he called UTSA grads Audra Smith and Josh Inglehart to the Cold Steel studios to work with them on a new brand of music and, more specifically, a new Beatles-related EP. The result was "A Barbershop Revival," which got its premiere on HBO's Real Sports with Bryant Gumbel last night (April 26). Showcasing the men of Cold Steel as the clean-cut and comb-over-sporting Beatle tribute band "The Barbershop," the program includes interviews with the men about their experiences as real, full-time barbers, their personalities and their history with the Beatles. The result was a project that Lombardi said was "hands-down the best thing I've ever shot," in his words. Not only that, but the men, who formed "The Barbershop" in 2010, performed a few other songs ("Hard Day's Night" and "Long and Winding Road") in the clip. And if you missed the Real Sports episode, you can check out the clip below.Q: How do I re-call a method from another class?
